ERZINGAN'S HISTORY IS VERY FASCINATING

According to a Bulletin Just Issued by the National Geographic Society.

(SPECIAL TO THE TELEGRAM) WASHINGTON, May 22.—The desperate resistance with which the Russians are meeting in their advance from Trebizond and Erzerum upon Erzincan focuses the limelight of public attention on one of the most fascinating interesting cities of Asia Minor, from an historical and legendary standpoint, according to the war geography bulletin issued today by the National Geographic Society from its Washington headquarters, which says:

"With a population variously estimated at from 15,000 to 23,000, half of whom are Armenians, the town of Erzincan, situated on the right bank of the Kara Su (black river), the western branch of the upper Euphrates, seems destined soon to witness another momentous struggle for race supremacy on its neighboring plains, a struggle even more bitter than that waged here six and a half centuries ago between the Turkish Seljuks and the Mongols. Two centuries previously, at about the time that William the Conqueror was subduing England, the Seljuks, under their great leader, Alp Arslan, had established themselves firmly in Asia Minor by the defeat of Romanus Diogenes, the Greek emperor whose rise to power dated from the hour when he was being led to execution for treachery. His manly grace awakened the amorous fancy of his empress, who commuted his death sentence to that of royal consort.

Tranquil Little City. "In times of peace Erzincan is a tranquil little city, with one wide thoroughfare and many dirty, unpaved alleys. It is important as a military post, and has clothing, tannery and boot factories in which modern British machinery is used. Silks, cotton goods and copper utensils were among its manufactures before the war.

"The fertile, well-watered plains surrounding the town are threaded by fairly good roads extending to four points of the compass—to Trebizond, seventy miles by air line to the north, to Erzerum, eighty miles east; to Kharput, seventy miles south, and to Adum-Karahissar, sixty miles northwest, the last named noted for its poppy fields and opium trade, as its name implies. (Black Castle of Opium).

"The most picturesque episode in the history of Erzincan concerns the establishment of the famous Armenian monastery of St. Gregory, eleven miles south of the town. Gregory, the reputed founder of the Armenian church, and called the Illuminator to distinguish him from the great fathers of the Eastern church of the same name, was a son of a Urartian chieftain who, in the third century of the Christian era, was bribed to assassinate the Armenian king, Chosroes. Many years later, in order to atone for his father's treachery, Gregory entered the service of Chosroes's son and successor, Tiridates, but when the youth was commanded to sacrifice to idols he refused, and his identity was discovered. He was thrown into prison where he languished for fourteen years until summoned before the king, much as were some of the Biblical prophets. Gregory was entrusted to cure Tiridates, who had been changed into a wild boar and attacked many of his subjects. With a sermon of sixty days' duration Gregory restored Tiridates's reason and was proclaimed a saint, while the ruler became the first Christian king of Armenia. One of the most interesting features of the legend is that part of it which concerns the cause of Tiridates's maniac

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy, when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of Limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleanses out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, phlegm who have yellow skins, blood disorders and sticky complexions are urged to get a quartize pound of Limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone's pronounced crack on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast—Advertisement.

Children love N.B.C. GRAHAM CRACKERS because they taste so good—slightly sweetened to satisfy youngsters' palates. Grown-ups like them because they not only taste good but are nourishing as well. Sold by grocers everywhere.

One way of enduring an unhappy situation is to think of the time when it will no longer endure. In the English papers and reviews this is seen in speculative articles on what will happen after the war is over.

The Spectator publishes an article proposing to build, as a perpetual memorial of the war, a via sacra or memorial road. This would follow the entire length of "the no-man's land, the dead ground between the two trench lines, and should run from Scicpou to Easle, from the sea to the Alps," a great road with monuments to the fallen, and to the deeds of heroism done by this or that individual, company, regiment, etc.

Every kilometer stone would bear a legend telling what happened at this point, and the whole way would therefore furnish a complete history, geographical and chronological, of the western struggle. "This sector of the line" was held during such and such dates by such and such a force, the legend would read, or "Here was won the battle of" such and such.

The author of the proposal does not want much repair work done along his road. "Let nature do its beneficial work here, and let the winds and the rain renew the blood-stained earth." All along the way tall poplar trees would rise, the stately poplars that make the French highways so royal in their pomp.

Beyond these blossoming trees would be set among the shell holes and craters, and in spring and autumn would lend new beauty to the scene. The author believes with reason that great throngs of tourists from Europe and America will flock to the trench lines, not out of idle curiosity, out to see the spot where dear ones fought and died. The making of the road and the traffic it would bring would be of great help to the districts of France and Belgium that have suffered so greatly during the war.

Little towns which have become war-famous, Arras, Armentieres, Hazebrouk, to name only three, would rebuild themselves and grow prosperous again from the flow of traffic down the great road.

Memorial arches would tell in sculpture and inscription of the part played by each of the nations and of special units of the war. It is a fine, generous idea only in that it suggests leaving Germany entirely out of the scheme. However they feel about that now, when the time came to build a via sacra they would find that the dead, being all kin, all mourners, are brothers.

affliction visited upon him by heaven for his treatment of the beautiful nun, Ripsime. Ripsime was a Christian convert of Rome who was so unfortunate as to receive the fervid admiration of the emperor Diocletian. Seeing no way to repulse the monarch's advances, Ripsime fled to Asia Minor with her abbess, Galana. Diocletian soon learned of her place of refuge and commanded Tiridates to seize the girl and return her to Rome. But in the meantime Tiridates had himself succumbed to her rare beauty.

Ripsime Massacred. "Ripsime, equally cold to the Armenian, was seized and tortured to death by the thwarted king, and with her were massacred her thirty-six followers.

"One of Gregory's first acts upon his elevation to royal favor was to build shrines for the relics of Ripsime and Galana, the site for those being miraculously selected, so continues the legend, by the Son of Heaven, who came down from above on a path of light and smote the earth with a golden hammer.

"Kalkobad I, greatest of Seljuk princes, illustrious both for his military prowess and as a patron of Saracenic architecture, won a decisive victory on the plains of Erzincan in 1230, a victory, however, which resulted in the downfall of the Seljuks thirteen years later, for the vanquished prince, Khwarizm Shah Jalal, was the only buffer between Kalkobad's kingdom and the Mongols. In 1243, after Kalkobad had been poisoned by his own son, Kiakhosrau, the Mongols administered a crushing defeat to this unworthy heir of a great sire, and peace was purchased only by the payment of heavy tribute.

"After the Mongols came the Tartars, then the Turkomans, and finally Erzincan became a part of the domain of Mohammed II in 1473, twenty years after the establishment of the Mohammedan empire at Constantinople.

"In 1784 Erzincan was almost completely destroyed by earthquake."

ONE CENT POSTAGE RATE BILL TO PASS

Congress at No Distant Day According to the Present Outlook.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Although little new legislation other than that having a direct bearing on the European war has been considered yet by Congress there is considerable assurance that a special bill may be reported providing for a reduction of the postage rate on local delivery letters from two cents to one cent. It is understood that a majority of the members of the House postal committee are inclined to give the matter early consideration. Some time ago a subcommittee conducted hearings on the subject. The information submitted at that time is regarded as most interesting. A disposition seems evident among the members of the whole committee to take some definite action on whether or not a bill should be favorably reported at this session of Congress. A prominent member of the committee said today that if such a bill is reported out for the consideration of the House, there will be no doubt about its passage by a substantial majority. In making this statement he said that he had not found any member who seemed to be opposed to the proposition. Tremendous pressure seems to have been brought on the members of both houses by constituents in behalf of drop letters. The movement for this legislation seems to be thoroughly national in scope as the appeals for action are coming from every section of the country. Representative Moon of Tennessee, chairman of the House postal committee says: that many hundreds is much too high. Should the rate be reduced from two cents to one cent I believe it will be of great benefit to business. The increase in the volume of mail as a result of the lower rate would probably cause no material falling off in the revenues. Cheaper postage on local delivery letters would aid small and large business alike. This alone would amply justify the government in taking this step. And in all other ways the government should be helpful in business affairs, not coercive and repressive."

About sixty bills have been introduced in the two houses of Congress proposing a reduction in the rate of postage on drop letters in one form or another. None of the members who have introduced bills seems to think that the proposed rate will have any serious effect on the revenues. In fact they seem almost unanimous in contending that the loss in revenue will be amply taken care of by the increased volume of mail. Many members active in the fight take the stand that the postoffice department was never intended to be a money making institution but to give the people the very best possible service at actual cost.

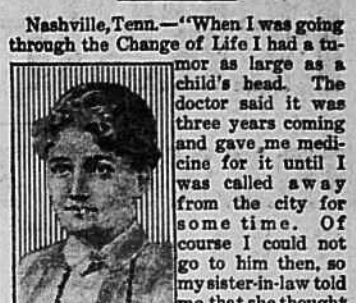

Among the members of Congress who have introduced bills and been active in the agitation for a lower rate of postage on drop letters are: Representatives Edwards and Vinson, of Georgia; Austin and McKellar, of Tennessee; Senator Overman, and Representatives Britt and Stedman, of North Carolina; Abernethy, of Alabama; Candler, of Mississippi; Aswell, of Louisiana; Sparkman, of Florida; and Carlin, of Virginia.

HOW MRS. BEAN MET THE CRISIS

Carried Safely Through Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Nashville, Tenn.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I had a tumor as large as a child's head. The doctor said it was three years coming and gave me medicine for it until I was called away from the city for some time. Of course I could not go to him then, so my sister-in-law told me that she thought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure it. It helped both the Change of Life and the tumor and when I got home I did not need the doctor. I took the Pinkham remedies until the tumor was gone, the doctor said, and I have not felt it since. I tell every one how I was cured. If this letter will help others you are welcome to use it."

—Mrs. E. H. BEAN, 525 Joseph Avenue, Nashville, Tenn. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a pure remedy containing the extractive properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, meets the needs of woman's system at this critical period of her life. Try it. If there is any symptom in your case which puzzles you, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Common Sense Will Stop Horrible Rheumatism

The famous Opie, a great English painter, was once asked what he mixed his paints with. "Brains," he replied. Rheumatism cannot live long in a body that is cared for by a head full of brains. Brains or common sense is an avowed enemy to rheumatism. The poisons with which every rheumatic body is filled, arise in the kidneys, or stomach or blood. This poison goes into the blood. It is stronger than the ordinary forces of the blood. It lodges in the muscles and joints. It gathers around nerves and presses upon them. It inflames the flesh. Pain comes and remains until the cause of the trouble, the acids and poisons, are driven out of the blood.

Salves and rubbing lotions and baths, hot towels and water bottles will not reach down to the throne room of the trouble. What nature wants is more power to the blood. Many forms of rheumatism are caused by secret, deplorable diseases. Nature surely uses common sense and tells the man to get rid of this bad blood. Here is a chance for you to use your common sense. How?

Get a bottle of S. S. S., the greatest blood purifier ever known. During 50 years it has cured thousands of cases of rheumatism and will cure you. It is purely vegetable and goes into the blood like rich food, goes into it. It throws off all impurities and makes good, pure red blood.
